N<sup>o</sup> 133 August 1994

After 8 joyful years as the IAS General Secretary and editor of the Newsletter

I hereby welcome
the new General Secretary
André Strasser

And I will spend
the coming spare time
relaxing in my garden

The General Secretary gets the last word

Dear IAS members

This is the last newsletter you will receive edited by me. I will use the opportunity to direct my sincere thanks to Bodil Sikker Hansen and Klaus Steen Hansen who have assisted me over the years with drafting, editing and word processing. The deadlines would never have been met without their dedicated efforts as I am personally quite lazy and inefficient.

The next newsletter appearing in October will be written and edited by my successor as the IAS General Secretary. He will be formally appointed at the IAS Congress in Recife, Brazil, in August.

You may notice that the style of this Newsletter cover differs from the normal ones. This time Klaus Steen Hansen is the artist.

I wish you all a good summer/winter 1994 with successful fieldwork and progress in your sedimentological research.

Finn Surlyk
General Secretary

REPORT ON SEDIMENT 94

The 9th annual meeting of German sedimentologists was held at the department of geosciences of the university of Greifswald from 25-27.5.94. Greifswald is an old Hanseatic city situated in NE-Germany (Pommern) at the Baltic Sea coast and hosts the smallest but one of the oldest German universities founded in the 1456. The traditions in geological education and research are about 100 years old. Due to the location characterized by the Baltic Sea, Quaternary and Upper Cretaceous deposits (especially the chalk cliffs of the Isle of Rügen) the research work mainly was focused on coastal and marine geology, Cretaceous palaeontology and sedimentology and, moreover, on sedimentology and stratigraphy of Pleistocene deposits (especially the Weichselian). Over many years geologists and physical geographers of the Greifswald university contributed to the knowledge of the Late Weichselian ice retreat and of the Holocene sedimentation history of the Baltic Sea. Accordingly the SEDIMENT 94 in which 242 participants from Germany, Austria, Denmark, Estonia, Poland and Czechia were registered covered a broad spectrum of themes. The 88 oral presentations and 63 posters contributed to the following:

- * Modern siliciclastic coastal sedimentation of the Baltic Sea (non-tidal and wave-dominated shorelines) and North Sea (both tidal and wave-dominated shorelines), special considerations were given to comparisons of both types of coastal environments regarding depositional processes and faunal zonation. Especially, the so-called "Bodden waters" which represent a unique type of shallow Holocene lagoonal-estuarine environments along the southern German Baltic Sea coast were dealt with in great detail.

- * Quaternary sedimentation of oceanic basins, especially the Arctic, as recorded in deep sea cores and showing glacial/interglacial cyclicality due to climatical changes; moreover, the sedimentary input of large rivers into shelf areas and oceanic basins (e.g. Lena and other Siberian rivers, Amazonas, Ganges-Brahmaputra) were discussed including volumetric estimates of sediment accumulation and erosion (e.g. alluvial Arcasfan/Chile).

* Pre- Quaternary deposits including both the classical Carboniferous sequences of the Ruhr area and also of NE-Germany as recorded in deep drill cores; moreover, modelling of compaction and other diagenetic processes.

* Carbonate sedimentology and sequence stratigraphy of Tertiary, Cretaceous, Triassic and Devonian deposits (Alps, Harz, Thuringia, Isle of Rügen chalk, Yemen).

* Applied and environmental sedimentology with special emphasis to the mineralogy and geochemistry of fluvial suspended load (e.g. rivers Elbe and Oder) and heavy metal distribution pattern of lacustrine and coastal settings.

Furthermore, in the course of 7 field trips (3 pre- and 4 post-meeting/ 2 of them by ship) throughout the NE-German Baltic Sea coast (Pommerania) including the Danish Isle of Bornholm the participants recognized the sedimentological attractions and beautiful scenery in the vicinity of Greifswald. The great number of participating young sedimentologists who reported on their current work stimulated the meeting very much. Two volumes of "Greifswalder Geowissenschaftliche Beiträge" have been published (Vol.1: Excursion guide; Vol.2: Abstracts).

IGCP Project No.369

"Comparative Evolution of Peritethyan Rift Basins"

The goal of this project is the integrated stratigraphic-sedimentologic-structural analysis of rift/wrench sedimentary basins in the peritethyan domain (i.e., from the eastern shores of the Atlantic Ocean to the Ural Mountains and the Indus River, and from the Baltic shield to equatorial Africa).

The project is coordinated by William Cavazza (Bologna, Italy), Alastair Robertson (Edinburgh, U.K.) and Peter Ziegler (Basel, Switzerland). For further information call or write to: W. Cavazza, Dept. of Mineralogical Sciences, Univ. of Bologna, Piazza di Porta San Donato 1, 40126 Bologna, Italy. Tel: 39-51-243-556; Fax: 39-51-243-336; e-mail: cavazza@goemin.unibo.it.

BSRG WORKSHOP ON EXPERIMENTAL AND THEORETICAL STUDIES OF
PROCESSES IN TURBIDITY CURRENTS
JANUARY 12-13, 1995 - CARDIFF, U.K.

The principal aim of the workshop is to discuss the current theoretical understanding and experimental techniques for investigation of turbidity currents and their deposits. The workshop will consist of short presentations, round table discussions and laboratory demonstrations.

Discussion topics will include: Problems and practice of generating and observing turbidity currents in laboratories, variations of sediment concentrations, sorting, etc. in turbidity currents, processes of sedimentation and the characteristics of the deposits, interaction of flows with topography, differences in behaviour between channelized flows and freely spreading currents, turbidity currents in density stratified ambient fluids.

Accommodation: Bed and breakfast accommodation is available in the University for a limited number of participants at £25 pr. pers. pr. night for 11-13 January, 1994.

Registration and deadlines: Registration fee £35, fellows of the society £30, students £20 (incl. buffet lunch, tea and coffee).

Title of proposed contribution and accommodation booking: 7th Oct. 1994.

Abstract for inclusion in meeting programme: 1st Dec. 1994.

For further information see under "Future meetings".
